

NEWS ITEM (CAREER CHANGE)

ESP FOR MANAGEMENT CLASS (2017)

LET US READ THIS NEWS BELOW

BANKER SWAPS RAT RACE FOR BUS LANE

A bank manager has given up his 30 000 pound a year job with NatWest to realize his childhood ambition of becoming a bus driver. Despite the 11.000 pound salary and anti-social hours, John Burgin, 48, has never been happier.

“Banking was a career but in the end it became just a job. Once I knew I was leaving, I used to go outside at lunchtime and watch as the buses drove up and down.

The time had come.”

His passion was awakened as a boy growing up in Sheffield, where he collected bus maps and timetables. But he went on to spend nearly 30 years working his way up through NatWest.

“The levels of stress are totally different. At the bank, things were very political: I worked hard all day and then took work home, and it never really finished. There is stress in driving a bus around Bristol, but it’s a different kind and I don’t take it home.

WHAT DO YOU THINK THE NEWSWORTHY EVENT OF THIS NEWS ABOVE?

- BANKER SWAPS RAT RACE FOR BUS LANE

A bank manager has given up his 30 000 pound a year job with NatWest to realize his childhood ambition of becoming a bus driver. (How could a bank manager change his career to become a bus driver? This can be said as newsworthy event as most people are actually working to advance their career, but how can a person who is already on top of his best career wants to change his career?)

BACKGROUND EVENT

- Despite the 11,000 pound salary and anti-social hours, John Burgin, 48, has never been happier.
- “Banking was a career but in the end it became just a job. Once I knew I was leaving, I used to go outside at lunchtime and watch as the buses drove up and down. The time had come.”
- His passion was awakened as a boy growing up in Sheffield, where he collected bus maps and timetables. But he went on to spend nearly 30 years working his way up through NatWest.
- “The levels of stress are totally different. At the bank, things were very political: I worked hard all day and then took work home, and it never really finished.

SOURCES:

- The News was taken from “The Business Times: a Reader Digest, UK”
- John Burgin, 48, a bus driver who formerly worked as bank manager shared his experience to the magazine’s reporter and editor.

REFERENCES:

- Team of English Language Center by PKPBI. Maulana Malik Ibrahim State Islamic Univeristy of Malang. 2009. English reading passage for Management (A Compilation). Malang:English Language Centre.
- Cotton, David et al. 2002. Market Leader. Essex: Longman. Pearson Education Limited.
- Cotton, David et al. 2012. Market Leader 3rd Edition. Essex: Longman. Pearson Education Limited.
- James F. Stoner & Edward Freeman (1990) in Management the fifth edition
- Murphy, Raymond. 1998. English Grammar in Use. Musselburgh, Scotland: Cambridge University Press.